Questions & Conclusion

While putting together the information in these pages, I have come to think of that work as similar to that of an armorer. The armorer produces weapons (in this case information, facts and data) and is often agnostic as to who buys their weapons or how they are used. One important difference here is that I hope the information in this work will not be taken out of context or used to mislead.

Regardless how readers think about or use the information herein, I believe a few percentages, perhaps as looked at through the eyes of an accountant, deserve special thought. Each cover a lot of ground and will be seen and interpreted differently. On the positive side, studying, analyzing and even arguing about the meaning of the numbers below (and the information in these pages) could bring new and interesting thoughts, theories, and conclusions about the ACLU.
